

7 Steps to Toilet Training Your Cat

Toilet training your cat is not difficult to do. It only requires some time, patience, and the right tools.

1

Relocate Box

- Move your cat's litter box to a spot right next to the toilet.
- Keep it there for as long as you feel it is needed.

2

Raise Box

- Raise the height of the litter box gradually.
- Every time you raise the height of the litter box, remove a little.

Pro-Tip: Secure the litter box to phone books or a stack of newspapers so that it doesn't move when your cat jumps onto it.

3

Move Box

- Gradually move the litter box 1 inch closer to the toilet each day.
- Continue removing the litter from the box until there is only a thin layer, no more than 1 inch deep.

Create Training Box

- Lift the toilet sheet and tape a piece of wax paper covering the whole of the toilet seat.
- Add flushable litter to the wax paper.
- Lift the toilet seat and tape a bowl or aluminum pan to the edges. Put down the toilet seat to hold the pan in place. Add some flushable litter to the pan.

Pro-Tip: Clean out the litter after each use and add some catnip to the clean litter.

5

Transition to Toilet

- Cut a hole in the wax paper or aluminum pan about one inch in the center and gradually increase the size of the hole until the cover is almost gone.
- Reduce the amount of litter so that there is no litter when the paper or bowl is removed.

6

Flush

- Flush the toilet after each use by your cat.

Pro-Tip: Do not teach your cat to flush the toilet. Although cats are able to learn to flush, they sometimes enjoy it a little too much – wasting water.

7

Reward

- Give your pet a treat! Rewarding your cat for a job well done is essential to their success.

Pro-Tip: If your cat is a little apprehensive about the water in the bowl, add some litter to the water & your cat will associate the smell with his litter box.
